

ABION
YACHT AIDA

In 1930, the royal chamberlain Gösta Tholin commissioned the engineer Knut Lyundberg to build this boat of what she had always dreamed of.

An 18.40 metre long and only 3.20 metre wide motorboat, suitable for the archipelago, to travel the countries of the Baltic Sea with their family. Helsingfors, Tallinn, Riga, Gdansk and Kiel, equipped with the most modern engine of its time, the Aida was the proud ambassador of the Swedish royals in the Baltic countries. There was even a copper oven in the aft cabin to keep out the cold nordic nights.

Now she is docked in her purpose-built jetty at the Abion Villa and has become a true Berliner. The captains show guests on the Nordic archipelago ship the city of Berlin from its most beautiful side - the water.
